WRITER REVEALS:

Hitler Reads Self To Sleep With His Wild West Stories

In the final dispatch of his series on the personal life of Adolf Hitler, FREDERICK C. OCHSNER discusses the dictator's library and his reading tastes.—EDITOR.

NEW YORK, June 13.—(UPI)—Adolf Hitler frequently reads himself to sleep with wild west stories written by a German who never visited America.

The author is Karl May, who has written scores of American Indian stories. His leading characters is "Old Shatterhand," a scout who goes through the customary frontier exploits. Marshal Hermann Goering presented Hitler with a complete set of the May stories, bound in velvet and placed in a special case.

Usually one or two of the volumes are missing from the case and are to be found in Hitler's bedroom in a small bedside bookcase that has a green curtain.

His personal library contains roughly 16,300 books kept in Berlin and at Obersalzberg. They may be divided generally into three groups.

Has Large Military Section

First, the military section containing some 7,000 volumes including the campaigns of Napoleon, the Prussian kings, the lives of all German and Prussian potentates who ever played a military role, and books on virtually all the well known military campaigns in recorded history.

There is Theodore Roosevelt's book on the Rough Riders, another war, also a book by Gen. von Steuben, who drilled our troops during the Revolution. There was also a book by Gen. Grant, and Gen. MacArthur, when he was war minister, presented Hitler with 400 books, pamphlets and monographs on the United States

The best propaganda machine in the world won't get far in the long run unless its military arm gives it something substantial to talk about and unless its government gives it war aims with which to work on the morale of the enemy.

Allied Lands Celebrating This Week-End

BY JOHN A. PARVIS

LONDON, June 13.—(UPI)—The world government and people took time today for a week-end of celebrations linked with the victory over Japan in the battle of Midway.

Australia celebrated today as Mac. Arthur day, in observance of the 43rd anniversary of the entry of Gen. Douglas MacArthur at the United States military academy.

Today the Allied nations will celebrate, with a week-end of picnics, dances and church services.

Messages came from leaders, millions in many countries.

In Australia, MacArthur said in a United Nations statement of the world council of churches:

"Today we dare to stand for truth, freedom and human spirit, was crucified and died on the cross, and it was not an end but a beginning."

"So that today, United Flags day, when our churchmen are gathered together to establish the supremacy of Christian principles, we can humbly and sincerely believe in God's help in our final victory."

The message will be read from all pulpits, from the pulpit of Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, prime minister of the Polish government in exile, and from the pulpit of a well-known life insurance executive and former alderman, Lieut. Both Capt. McColl and Lt. Layton will return at the present rank to the new Canadian Army.

Capt. McColl is a well-known life insurance executive and former alderman. Lieut. Layton is one of Edmonton's younger lawyers, having been connected with the firm of Milner, Steer, Poirier, Maryland and Bowker. The Wetaskiwin training centre will be in command of Lt.-Col. E. H. Strick-

LANDING ON SEVASTOPOL

BY BRUCE HUTCHISON

WICHITA, Kans.—(UPI)—The post-war policies of the United States government had straight away led to the establishment of collective security under a League of Nations. They are, in fact, the direct negation of the United States' policy after the last war. Yet there is no intention of following precisely the policy of Woodrow Wilson. Instead, the new League will be allowed to grow naturally from the bottom, where the old League was imposed suddenly from the top without economic roots.

When this war is over the United States will be in the hurry to fix the final limits of the peace. No final definitive agreement will be made until the United States has joined the Allies to plan for the existing shortage of food.

Provincial officials are making inquiries as to whether it would be possible to have persons jailed for minor offences to do farm work if it was stated.

part couple of days ago spoke for itself. All our side had to do was to see that the enemy peoples—and the neutrals too—heard about it. That was the secret of Berlin and Rome in their radio "counter-attacks." They were thorough, though not thorough.

TAKE CLEAR STAND

But we did something else along the propaganda front that was probably even more effective. We managed to let the people of Europe know about the rapid shaping post-war world program of the United Nations. And for the first time, the British, wise enough to realize that they have been with their main sources of Germany, took a clear stand about Britain's attitude toward the German people. (It is interesting to note that American high command will not fail to note this excellent British example when it comes to war with military partners.) The British not only sent tens of thousands of bombers to drop leaflets over Germany. They accompanied the bombs with a message to Germans. It was very simple. It said: "We are sorry to kill you. But we have no choice but to kill Hitler and his Nazi regime. We recognize that is not you who are responsible for the suffering of your Nazi leaders. Get rid of them."

So far as I know, this is the first time that such a broadsheet, which certainly raises government policy, has been put forward in the United Nations in the consequences of all the developments in Europe. The results have caused. They argue that the German people themselves are responsible for the suffering of the Nazi armies, for they have given Hitler their full support.

Some of the American correspondents in Europe seem to think that in Germany the other day are not so sure that the promise to treat the people of the Reich will stick given by the Nazis. They are not so sure that the Nazis will keep their promises to the German people. They give an interesting explanation. Tell the German people that they have nothing to live for. All they care about and their attitude, say the correspondents, will be this: First, to back Hitler to the hilt. Then, if Hitler loses this year in the hope that he will triumph and that then they as members of the Master race will be given a new lease of life. Will they not? So, even if Hitler loses, why the Allies have promised that the German people will be treated fine. After all, the British and themselves coming out all right either way.

SPLIT PEOPLE, REGIME

That Berlin has taken notice of this Allied attempt to split the German people from their regime was shown by the question asked of the Foreign Minister. Are not raids on Cologne and Essen a proof that the German people would not be held responsible for the crimes of their masters?

It told its listeners that the British are aiming at the destruction of the German people. And Mr. Simon Nott, Wolles was roundly attacked and his outline of the peace and post-war world twisted and turned until he was reduced to giving Hitler your full support, you will be held responsible with him and will have to take the consequences. Germans, make your choice.

It is not so easy to simple, of course, to get away with this. There are German, perhaps a majority—who would gladly throw Hitler. Himmler, the real Hitler, would not be so easily swayed. But how to do it? They have the means to do it. But they are not organized to do it. The German masses come as they are helpless. If and when the German collapse comes—as it came in 1918—will the German masses turn on the Kaiser as quickly as they chased the Kaiser in 1918. Will the German masses be willing to pay for their nation's plunder and pillage of Europe?

Part of our success in the past week, and part of last week, seemed due to the fact that we apparently learned a lesson from the failure of the German Nazis. Then we won the actual battle, but certainly lost the propaganda war. The Nazis had to win the war this year in the hope that they will triumph and that then they as members of the Master race will be given a new lease of life. Will they not? So, even if Hitler loses, why the Allies have promised that the German people will be treated fine. After all, the British and themselves coming out all right either way.

And these correspondents suggest that the only sensible way to do it is to do much better. Admiral and also pressing furiously the effort to storm the Sevastopol fortress.

But still does not furnish a definite pattern for the "summer" offensive to crush Russia which Hitler has promised his people. Summer is not far off. The Russians, however, until June 21, the first anniversary of the Nazi attack on Russia.

DEFENSES REBUILT

While still not from tactical or strategic considerations conditioning Axis operations, the close approach of that anniversary of bloody memory of the Nazi invasion of Russia is bound to affect their war plans. In the French evacuation of the output has not yet raised its Axis reserves to supply the needs of the war. This would weaken Rommel's striking power and actually warrant the classing of him as a "defensive" fighter.

In Libya the situation is more clearly defined. Loss of the Bizerte harbor was a serious matter obviously for the Allies, but not necessarily critical.

It remains to be seen whether the time and resources available will reflect the June 21 milestone.

If the broadside of Russian-American antiaircraft guns in the French evacuation of the output has not yet raised its Axis reserves to supply the needs of the war. This would weaken Rommel's striking power and actually warrant the classing of him as a "defensive" fighter.

Alongside the full-throated roar of current production at Ford of Canada, skilled engineers work swiftly and surely in "Pilot Bay". Here, full-size pilot models of tomorrow's military vehicles are individually built, studied and tested.

Thus, Canada's engineering brains and foresight wage an all-out war—to give Empire fighting machines increased strength, striking power and all-round fighting ability.

On distant battlefields, in sub-zero weather and in the blazing heat of tropical sun, our armies wheel into battle . . . Taking weather and fighting conditions in their smooth stride, United Nations warriors trust their lives and their missions to the vehicles built by Canadian craftsmen.

Critical Ford test drivers take the pilot models through pounding, punishing trials on a "battlefield" testing ground. Powerful X-rays probe deep into metals and vitals of these "secret weapons." Nothing is left to chance by Ford of Canada workers. They're giving everything they've got to please the most important customers they ever had: our fighting men.

Frenchmen Held The Post

Comparatively it was not a big affair in point of numbers engaged, but the Free French forces made history at Bir Hacheim. For sixteen days they held out against everything Rommel could send against them, then drew themselves together and left the enemy to bury his dead. It will be a large Axis cemetery that thus marks the spot where Frenchmen who refused to bow to Hitler made their stand.

These visitors in a daring fight against superior odds proved that the other comrades of the other Allied soldiers who are serving in that hot corner of the Libyan desert. The Free French ally stands higher in the estimation of the anti-Axis people for their splendid achievement. They had the most difficult task ever ordered out; no men could have done more.

It is to be hoped, in one way or another the people of France will learn about the battle of Bir Hacheim. If so they will be thrilled by the exploit of their countrymen and from their example take courage to resist the tyrants who are trying to crush the spirit of patriotism in the homeland.

United For War And Peace

Britain and the United States have concluded a full long term agreement with Russia. The aims are the same. Three-power co-operation is thus pledged to the fullest degree, in winning the war and in shaping world conditions afterward. The basis of both agreements are the principles laid down in the Atlantic Charter.

Complete understanding has been reached as to the establishment of a second front in Europe. And the announcements leave Berlin to guess what that understated is. The main thing to be given to the enemy in action, not words, action of such kind, in such places and at such times as considered likely to make it most impressive.

The important fact is that Russia is to be a partner of Britain and the United States in establishing peace in the post-war years. That they will remain partners during the war was already assured. Circumstances made that certain. The new feature is that they are to work association with the second front is being made, and in guaranteeing that there will not be another Hitler to deal with ten or twenty years later.

A key clause in the treaty between Britain and Russia is that each binds itself to assist the other in the defense of other states. No doubt a similar clause is included in the Washington pact. Without the pledge nobody would take the promises of post-war collaboration at face value.

For twenty years Russia was isolated from the rest of the world because revolutionaries in other countries had, claimed to have, or were suspected to have, a hand in, and many backing from Moscow. It would be to no use of such propaganda meddling, then is no reason why the Soviet, the Monarchy and the Republic cannot pull together in friendly association to the security and benefit of the world.

The Limit Of Concession

Prime Minister King's speech setting forth the position of the Government in regard to conscription will be disappointing to those who expected and hoped for an announcement that a compulsory system of national service would be immediately adopted. Instead, the plan is to empower the Government to send men drafted under the compulsory training system to any point outside Canada, if, and when it may be necessary to that supplement the forces raised by voluntary recruitment.

The reason for proceeding in this way is no secret. It is a concession to the minority in the country—mainly in the provinces. Quebecers are opposed to sending their volunteers to defend Canada, or at most outside this continent.

None the less a concession because Mr. Cardin, who is heading the oppositionists in the Commons, says Quebec is thus being betrayed, and that he who recognizes the fact that it is a concession involves political danger, not only to the Government but to the country. For while Mr. Cardin says Quebec is being betrayed, critics on the other side say in equally strong language that Quebec is too much catered to.

The course chosen is one of moderation. In no other way could the majority demand for overseas conscription be handled without deterioration to the national character. Mr. King has gone as far as any man could go to prevent an open racial cleavage—a cleavage which would not cut across the House of Commons only, but through every province, and through every community in which there is a mixed population. It is the extreme limit that could be made for national unity, rather for the avoidance of national disunity of a peculiarly damaging and dangerous kind.

This is something Mr. Cardin and his associates should think about. The Government has gone as far as the majority will consent to go; and as the ex-minister said: "In the end the majority will have their way." In the end the distinct and lasting injury of Quebec if members from that province should refuse to accept this tempered application of the policy which no other Government would apply with equal consideration to the minority.

Quebec's members cannot afford to make their province a standing target for censure in other parts of the Dominion to give an anti-Quebec twist to political action and inaction in the other provinces. They are in the position of the forgotten member of Confederation, to the permanent harm of its people, and with cruel injustice to the thousands of splendid French-Canadian men who are now serving voluntarily in the fighting forces.

How can they stand this? They must and others should be to the will of the majority and put their province in line with the others as agreeing to the application of compulsion as and when necessary.

It is explained the present intentions are to apply coupon rationing only to sugar. For the time, and on condition the "honor system" will be continued in respect to other commodities. In other words, we have the choice of being reasonable or being rationed.

Mr. Gerard, former United States ambassador to Germany, says when the power is broken the people of that nation will be thrilled by the exploit of their countrymen and from their example take courage to resist the tyrants who are trying to crush the spirit of patriotism in the homeland.

The disease affecting the H.B.C.'s herd of cattle has spread, and now grows to the point that for districts although it cannot possibly affect cattle in other parts of the country, it has reached the completed stage of the whole Peace River district. The herd is composed of well-bred animals imported in 1891, which had been kept at a ranch about 15 miles from Fort St. John, and driven away from the district.

The sale, made by the Canadian Pacific Railway, was to be made for May 1st, the largest in the history of the company since the days of the boom. During the month considerable sums of money were received. The major portion of the herd was in Manitoba, much of it in the south-western portion of that province. The greater portion was sold to actual settlers.

Today's Text

Ye that fear the Lord, trust in the Lord; he is near to you and their shield—Psalm 113:1.

I am not for with Thee at hand to bless; I am not for with, and tears no bitterness—Henry Grey Luise.

"Aggression has followed aggression with such speed in so many parts of the world that one can now predict what new areas the war may reach next year, next month or next week. Does not the world come from the east and from the west?" — Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada.

Why Mine Our Gold?

LETTERS TO EDITOR:

Editor, Bulletin: In one of your recent Bulletins I notice that Dorothy Thompson suggests the U.S. government might help the metal shortage by using its large stock of gold bars now buried in banks and mines to make much-needed oil pipe lines.

No doubt gold would make a pretty pipe line and would be of great value in getting the United States into the war, but, as far as I am concerned, it is not so important as to give an anti-Quebec twist to political action in the other provinces. They are in the position of the forgotten member of Confederation, to the permanent harm of its people, and with cruel injustice to the thousands of splendid French-Canadian men who are now serving voluntarily in the fighting forces.

Quebec's members should be to the will of the majority and put their province in line with the others as agreeing to the application of compulsion as and when necessary.

There are thousands of hardy, experienced miners here in Canada, especially in the United States, who are now making gold out of the mountain and river beds only to have it taken away and sent to the United States for a great Canadian highway? Not so, according to Dorothy Thompson.

The certain few think in terms of near-supervision. They believe that the U.S. government, by any achievement beyond a well-published ability to do so, would be famous. Perhaps right now America is merely playing the game, yet I know something other than heat makes sleep pleasant.

Time was when the U.S. government would have had as fortify the peaceful picket fence we have across the southern reach of the country.

Well, if Mr. Mackenzie King and his cabinet had seen merit in the suggestion, they would have responded to it. Did Mr. Black, during the time of the depression, respond to the number of jobs for Canadians at some $40.00 per week, or to the number of working hours, but rate?

Re-establishment

Editor, Bulletin: As behoves an intelligent government we see it is now planning a re-establishing system of the war veterans and we have suggested that, profiting from past experience, any assistance should be given gradually even if given in increments.

But it will be to the nightmare of a land settlement scheme, a scheme which has been foisted upon us, and which is not the language of tradition. It is not the language of our fathers, nor of our forefathers.

The British, in the fight against Fascism, have infinitely more in common with the French than they have with Fascist Britain.

These French heroes who are dying saving their country, are our own people in a far more actual sense than the French. We are all brothers in the cause of freedom.

We have the Quebec block to thank largely for our victory.

At the same time, we should realize that English-speaking Canadians are not to be blamed for the fact that Quebec, representing a very noisy minority, is not the language of tradition. It is not the language of our fathers, nor of our forefathers.

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

MUSIC studies in all sections of life will be continued with increased fervor with the wind-up of their seasonal activities and try the tests of various institutes to grant certificates of ability. Distinguished musicians will be here to conduct examinations. The Toronto Conservatory of Music will be here June 12-14, day period, from June 18 to 20, and June 21-22. It will be the first of the Toronto Conservatory's examinations to come. He will be here June 18-24. John Oliver will be here June 20-23, and Frank Blatchford June 23-29. Both will have lists of candidates to examine. Messrs. Kihl and Blatchford have been here before. It will be Mr. Berlin's first visit.

John Oliver, 26, has conducted his pupils in a joint piano and violin recital at Bissell Memorial Institute, recently. He has been here since the two leaders gave several duets which were assisted by the piano, violin and cello. The soloists were Ruth Gordan and the Misses Berlin, who will be here June 18-24. They will be here June 20-23, and Frank Blatchford June 23-29. Both will have lists of candidates to examine. Messrs. Kihl and Blatchford have been here before. It will be Mr. Berlin's first visit.

Boris Berlin, for the second consecutive year, has been elected to the faculty and the board of examiners of the Toronto Conservatory. All are agreed he has made a valuable study of the piano in his native Russia. Later he came to Canada in 1936 and settled in St. John's, Newfoundland, where he attended Geneva University and the Geneva Conservatory. Among his former conservatory students were such famous masters as Mark Hambourg and Leopold Kroll, among others. Since coming to Canada he has established himself as an outstanding and original piano teacher. He is the author and co-author of several works dealing with piano teaching.

Mr. Blatchford is one of Canada's outstanding musicians. His career began in the Toronto Conservatory, from which he graduated with a gold medal. Then followed five years at Leipzig Conservatory and three years at the Royal College of Music, winning the coveted Heling prize for his year when he was graduated. He studied with the great teachers of the world, Hans Sitt and Mietze, and theory and composition under Reincke and Reger. Between 1928 and 1930 he was invited to join the faculty of the Toronto Conservatory.

For several seasons he toured with concert parties and as a soloist. Deeply interested in chamber music, he formed the Toronto String Quartet, which enjoyed considerable success. One of the examiners in piano and strings for the University of Toronto piano students, Mr. Blatchford is a graduate of the Royal College of Music, London, England. A strenuous worker, he has given many performances throughout the Dominion. His ability as a teacher is evidenced by the fact that his piano students have won many notable successes with various amateur contests. His compositions include works for piano, voice and choir. A serenade for male voices won success in the larger United States contests. In 1935 he founded the radio work. In 1935 he founded the Blatchford String Symphony, and is its conductor. In addition to his work in Toronto, an outstanding success was scored.

Mr. Kihl, one of the Dominion's most distinguished pianists, was born and educated in Canada, but later studied at Leipzig, and still later enjoyed a successful 10-year career in London, England. For more than 10 years he has lived in Toronto. Since his arrival in Canada he has been before the public, assisting in the organization of piano groups in all the larger cities from Montreal to Victoria, and as far north as Yellowknife. As a soloist with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra at least five times, and with the Toronto Civic Orchestras, the Vancouver Symphony, and other orchestras. As a lecturer, teacher, and conductor, Mr. Kihl has contributed much to the musical development of the Dominion.

Another distinguished Canadian musician coming here this month is Dr. Healey Willan, composer, teacher and conductor, who will conduct examinations on behalf of the Trinity College of Music, of which he is president. Dr. Willan, chormaster of Robertson United Church, is locally representative. Dr. Willan will conduct his services at Robertson church on the evening of June 23, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the church.

Dr. Willan was one of Great Britain's outstanding theorists and educators, and returned prior to coming to this country. Even after many years residence overseas, many Englishmen, Britons and frequent references to him and recall with pleasure the year he spent in Canada. His ability in all fields which he has chosen to cultivate is recognized and his services, both personal and professional, will be awaited with interest.

Max Pirani, pianist and teacher, will return to the University of Alberta from July 20 to conduct master-classes in piano playing.

The Human Eye

By J. E. THOMAS, Optometrist

The eye of the savage differed from that of the civilized man in that man is made manifest when the livelihoods of the people are concentrated.

The savage gave up his wild life to learn new things and educated his visual power for distant objects both day and night.

The civilized man engaged in indoor work and had to adapt his eyes to near work.

The wear and tear in this latter type is greater and is also often apparent that there is structural impairment.

These are the physical penalties of increased material culture, and consequently the man must accept the conditions, so that he may enjoy the fruits of civilization and culture.

The overtaxed visual function is manifest among the professions, the artists, seminaries, lawyers, and engineers, who have to put their eyes to work on the human system unless corrected.

Navy League Aids Gallant Seamen

This picture indicates more clearly than any words can tell the terrible conditions which the men of the merchant marine must endure in addition to the perils of the sea, enemy surface raiders, submarines, minefields and bombing planes. The people of Edmonton are being asked to help alleviate the sufferings of these men by contributing generously to the tag day appeal which will be made on June 29. This will be followed by a special appeal for supplies to comfort men of the Merchant Navy. The tag day will be under the auspices of the Navy League of Canada, an organization charged by the Dominion government with looking after the welfare of the men of the merchant marine.

A five-year-old boy suffered a fractured left leg Friday evening when he fell under the rear wheel of a car.

Arthur McElroy, 5, of 8310 103 street, was clinging to the rear wheel of a car which was heading up to a wood pile when he fell under the child's feet, when he fell off.

The left leg is believed to be broken and will require surgery. He was carried into the house and after a doctor was called, the child was removed to the University hospital.

Ralph Crete, 10, of 1011 103 street, was driving his bicycle when he heard police who were unaware of the presence of the child and first knew of the accident when he heard the child scream. —V.

The boy was removed to the hospital by ambulance.

Be Wise When You Choose Your Partner

International Marriages Seldom Insure Happiness.
Young People Usually Believe That Naught Matters Except Love; They're Wrong

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a 20-year-old girl who has had many ideals. Have a college degree and good business opportunity awaiting me. I have been in love with a nice girl. Intelligent, Good character. Divorcee. She is of different nationalities and religions. Her mother does not have our code of ethics.

If she could marry, what would be our chances? I am a marriage turned out happily?

DOROTHY DIX

Anne, Practice caution. Too many difficulties in the way. Of course, matrimonial miracles do happen occasionally, and now and then a girl finds a man destined for her ordained for failure is successful. But, as I need not warn you, most marriages are not made in heaven. A man's guardian angel seldom intervenes to save him from the consequences of his choice of an unsuitable marriage. It leaves him to reap the results.

When a boy and girl are in love, they may be willing to sacrifice all marriage except love, but that is not true. There are a number of things that a husband and wife's affection for each other, that make or mar their marriage, and one of them is money. A man's wife's affection for him in marriage makes a poor bargain.

It is easy to say why mothers who have known the hardships of poverty should want their daughters to marry men who can tell them that love doesn't last, but a bank account does.

Mother's present overestimate of a man's worth will last or not. And you and your girl differ so much, points that it would seem to be almost impossible for you to live together in peace and harmony.

There is nationality, to begin with, inherent characteristics, different habits and customs and points of view. We are just as much a part of our country as our race and your complexion. Very few inter-national marriages are happy because the two people have been brought up to different ways of thinking and cooking and eating and dressing and living and giving service to each other. Little as you think it, even so small a thing as who wears the coat or who wears the garter in the salad or not can be provocative of a daily spat.

Then, in every case there is religion which goes for a win in any family in which the husband holds to one set of beliefs while the wife adheres to another. In case there is the barrier of social caste between you and the girl. You belong to a certain group, he is standing in the community. He is mother is not popular. It is no use to say that you are marrying the girl, not her family. No man does that. When you marry, you are a son to his parents. You can't separate the girl from her mother. Her mother's ideas will affect the wife's decisions.

Your mother's reputation and occupation will be a shadow on them. You can no more blot out the girl's family than you can your own.

So, taking it all in all, there is not much chance of such an unequal marriage being a happy one.

DOROTHY DIX.

Your Baby And Mine

Every parent is harassed by the question of how home tasks shall be apportioned in the case of the child.

The mother is inclined to believe that work will seem sweeter if it is placed upon her.

She knows that she should have an allowance and so she wants to be independent contingen-ent upon the work. This is the imagination that will be an easy avenue to a position of power.

Elated, she says, "I can't stand it, done or done properly it won't be paid off. If the child misbehaves, she'll be angry with me."

All of this is probably the easiest but not the best method. If work is to have real value, it must be done because it is his or her share of the household chores.

If an allowance is to be given, the mother should be the why-for and the management of money, it has to be a predictable sum, and the child should be given the right with its willing or unwilling mistakes.

Every household has tasks which some one of its members has to perform, children as well as adults. Every child has his or her share of the housework and will be taken except by having stated with which to experiment.

It is important that tasks should be allotted according to his needs according to his needs and his capacity to use it.

Those who are paid for there are innumerable numbers. Some children overwork themselves for the sake of the money, others care little about the housework, those fatigued all children need the same experience with money. Some children are born with a desire to hang or bang or what can be done with others. Their education should be based on the fact that they have only what they can earn and it disappears at the whim of an employer.

If parents would only keep separated these two departments of housework, the child would be more satisfied, have themselves great. Taking away a child's allowance may be an easy method of punishment, but it may drive the child to do what he wants the freedom to be naughty and the privilege of paying for it with the consequences to which they are indifferent.

Likewise, it is far better to let a child's allowance be given to him than to have no money and thus build up a child's horrid tendency to say, "I want help!" for it to get what he asked for.

So, for the sake of the child's experiments in learning to use money, which is a skill in itself and equally for his in recognizing that, as part of the household, he has tasks, don't一味 money for tasks performed. Treat money as you do all other privileges with miles to guard.

The Ohio State team-of-four championship was won this year by Miss Mary McDaniel, Mrs. Ray, Mrs. Mary G. Churchill of Detroit and S. Megal of New York. This is the first time in the history of the event that a woman has been a member of the winning team. In fact, the championship has always been won by all-Cleveland teams, except in 1938 when the winning team included some out-of-town players.

This constant nagging about getting a rich husband is getting on my nerves. I am not too pressed. Should I break my engagement to the fine, poor boy I love? He was a good boy, but he is a son of different nationalities and religions. He's a motherless boy. His mother does not have our code of ethics.

If she could marry, what would be our chances? I am a marriage turned out happily?

ANSWER.—First of all, if both of you think that love is very strong in me, then I am in love with you because I have fallen in love with a poor man and want to marry him.

Caribbean Crisis

By Eaton K. Goldthwaite

CHAPTER XIV
DRONINGSCADE was busy with mid-morning activity, when Bill Talcott with a car, drove up from his hotel, came down the hill from Hotel 1828 Islands through the narrow walk on which a few tourists and tourists travelled in detached groups inspecting bargains in the windows. Some were buying, some were not needed, amongst themselves. Naval and marine trucks rolled on the left side of the road, the drivers swearing at fast-moving taxis. Blast of like boxes, melody of horns, loud talk and laugher, and the braying of a donkey were Charlotte Amalie's complement of morning sounds.

The surprised Talcott noted his nostrils flaring at the pungent odour of rum.

The surprised Talcott's prediction by almost two hours; MacDowell acted though he'd arrived in Pillbury Sound while the Blue Petrel was still blowing for a pilot. They had luck at Tortola dock. The harpooner and crew were off to work, but Talcott with a group of forlorn natives whom some smuggler, possibly June Paterson had called his friends and had gone off, taking the boat. Sebastian with her head held high, and the Professor found lodgings elsewhere. Sebastian followed his usual custom of sleeping in the sun.

Talcott passed over a radiogram in favor of the phone, and his remarks were: "Old Man Winters had a full blast for an hour. Old Man Winters would be working on his second dig."

Talcott had called him no longer.

"I might have known. 'When'll he come back?'" he had time to make the Clipper. He has appointments in London."

"I'm not worried about that too."

"Old man will be busier than a bee."

"He said, 'Let me talk to his secretary.'"

"Just a moment, I'll connect you to his busi—click and a new voice, 'Mr. Winters'—and a new voice."

"This is Bill Talcott. What's all this business about not getting my digging tools?"

"An appreciable pause. Then,

"Sorry. I am allowed to dispose of my digging tools."

"Blast your regulation! I mailed those vouchers, every last one of them. Striders is trying to burn me at the stake."

"I'm sorry. I have been given explicit orders not to discuss the matter," and click the rancid off."

"So that was how it was to be."

The old steamer boy, Bill Talcott, crawled up the grimy steps in trying to locate Winters by phone, like a lost headless horseman.

"I'm not the man for the committee telling them how to run the war. Quitting the booth he seized a blank and composed a missive.

A black and white photograph of Captain Lowell Brod, and the designation "G-2".

The detective's attitude had changed. He had taken a long hard look at the street. His often-repeated suggestion that they still had to get the money out of the bank had been with a hasty, "Well, you been to the bank, of course."

In the shop, Mr. Winters' offices they had no difficulties. There was room aplenty for the return trip.

"A most point arises here," Bill Talcott grumbled. "Who pays for my passage?"

"You do," MacDowell grumbled.

"I'm not going to account of Bill Talcott's bank without him."

In the square, MacDowell cast longing eyes at the Bamboo bar's entrance. "I know. It's awful hot," he suggested.

Talcott didn't respond. "Do I have any place else to sit?" he asked abruptly.

"There is someone I must see before I leave," he announced.

MacDowell grunted. "Oh, ha ha got a friend?"

"Yeah. In case I'll come along anyhow. I put nothing else to do."

Bill Talcott shivered and started for the quay. As an arched bridge between buildings he turned off through the bamboo bar. The walls were dark with age, clothes-stone steps and entered a door.

"It's a room. All the rooms are at a typewriter, and at night of Bill Talcott she said, "Hello."

"Hello, you're in a room's bed?"

"It's its important enough."

"It is," Talcott grumbled.

She vanished through a door and in a moment reappeared. "Please come in," she cooed.

"He's really terribly busy."

The room they entered was a compact, well-arranged room, even sparsely furnished. A desk, a filing cabinet, a few straight chairs, a small sofa, and nothing more on the wall. All the furniture was a man with thinning gray hair and handsome weathered face who was considered them. His eyes were remarkably hazed unless he squinted, then he saw everything, gave out nothing. That was the way MacDowell from unbrushed hair to unbrushed shoes and the planes behind MacDowell's head.

The man nodded in Talcott but did not rise, nor did he speak.

Bill Talcott said, "Can you do anything on Able?"

The man at the desk pursed his lips. "We can catch it," he said in a slow, measured tone.

Bill Talcott said, "When an auditor from a Federal Chemical Company unit, a bankrupt, surrenders leaving himself in no charge of the island, till bear watching."

The grey eyes closed thoughtfully. Long, immobile fingers dripped into the desk drawer.

"Is this your suspect?" he now, musical voice asked.

HOT SHOTS!

A DUEL WAS FOUGHT IN TEXAS BY ALICE SHOTT AND LOVIE NOTT. SHOTT WAS SHOT! SHOTT WAS NOTT. IN THIS CASE IT IS BETTER TO BE SHOTT THAN NOTT! RUMOR SAYS NOTT WAS NOT SHOT BUT THE SHOT SHOTT SHOT PROVES EITHER THAT THE SHOT SHOTT SHOT AT NOTT THIS NOTT OR THAT SHOTT NOTT OR AS ACCIDENTS ARE FREQUENT MAYBE THE SHOT SHOTT SHOTT SHOTT SHOTT HIMSELF AND SHOTT WOULD BE SHOTT AND NOTT WOULD NOTT. IT APPEARS, HOWEVER, THAT THE SHOT SHOTT SHOT SHOT NOT SHOTT BUT NOTT BELIEVE IT OR NOT.
